"d0" is about midnight sounds, lone nightstates of mind, in various settings but mostly when everything goes to sleep, city keeps running its heart, but in some kind of distance. special type of warmth becomes slightly present, once music is played, it is obvious. at such moment, what becomes important is not the words of instruments, effects, music-scapes and their stories, but the messages told by absense of sound inbetween, the spatial timings, status quo which is not status quo, because someplace far away, sometime far ahead/behind, there is a point of energy, focus, passion, need, love. 'd0' is about frozen night-world, time and space stand still while the flux of feelings are accepted and therefore become eternal.

to the black lightless corners where there is no sound, where the story seemingly doesn't tell anything: it is the main substance of what is trying to come accross. inside the repetition and minimalism, but not quite, just a bit off it.
